The Philadelphia Eagles are signing running back Saquon Barkley to a two-year, $41.2 million contract extension, according to ESPN's Adam Schefter. This deal makes Barkley the first-ever $20 million per year ball-carrier and locks him in through the 2027 campaign. The former New York Giants' No. 2 overall pick dominated in his first season with Philly, racking up 2,005 rushing yards and 15 total touchdowns in 16 games. His new deal includes $36 million in total guarantees, and he can earn up to an additional $15 million in incentives and escalators. The 28-year-old's new deal could signal a market increase for running backs moving forward after the position became devalued over the last half-decade. Printable Fantasy Football Cheat Sheets By Format Cheat sheets are a powerful tool in fantasy football drafting, but they're only useful if they're optimized for your league's format. Not sure which scoring format your league uses? Be sure to check your league settings before the draft! Here's a breakdown of the cheat sheets we offer: PPR (Point-Per Reception) In PPR leagues, players earn one point for every catch they make, giving a significant boost to wide receivers and pass-catching running backs. This format elevates the value of players who excel in the receiving game. Half-PPR Half-PPR offers a balanced approach, giving moderate weight to receptions while still emphasizing rushing performance. This format strikes a balance between the value of running backs and wide receivers, making it a favorite among many fantasy managers. Non-PPR Non-PPR is the traditional format of fantasy football, rewarding players based purely on yardage and touchdowns. It places a premium on workhorse running backs who grind out yardage on the ground. PFF's Redraft Rankings These rankings are a consensus of our Fantasy Analysts — Jason Katz, Kyle Soppe, and Derek Tate. Each ranks the player individually, and then using the average, we create a consensus, offering you multiple options to consider. Click to view our full redraft rankings. 1) CeeDee Lamb, WR | Dallas Cowboys With Justin Jefferson losing Kirk Cousins, Lamb is in the running to be the first WR off the board in 2024 drafts, alongside Tyreek Hill and Ja'Marr Chase. Lamb's situation is ideal, making him a top-five pick and a strong candidate to be the top WR selected. 2) Tyreek Hill, WR | Miami Dolphins While Hill is nearing the later years of his career, there's no reason to believe he's anything other than elite. Debates between Hill and CeeDee Lamb for the top WR spot in 2024 drafts are common, and Hill should be selected no later than the fifth pick in fantasy drafts. 3) Christian McCaffrey, RB | San Francisco 49ers McCaffrey is seen by many as the clear choice as the first overall pick in fantasy drafts, but the PFF Consensus Rankings view McCaffrey as second overall. That said, it's a close second. His combination of talent, opportunity, and proven production makes him just about the safest and most valuable player to build your fantasy team around. 4) Breece Hall, RB | New York Jets Hall is a strong candidate for a top-five pick in fantasy drafts. Whether you choose him over a wide receiver or Robinson depends on your draft strategy and how you want to construct your team. Hall's upside makes him a viable selection as high as No. 2 overall. 5) Ja'Marr Chase, WR | Cincinnati Bengals Chase remains a surefire first-round pick in 2024 fantasy drafts. While there's a case for him being the first wide receiver off the board, his slight volatility places him as WR3 behind Hill and Lamb in many rankings. Our trade analyzer estimates his value at 180 points, which makes his value similar to: Bijan Robinson is projected for 0.0 fantasy points in PPR scoring this week as he faces the Tampa Bay Buccaneers. Week 1 Projections Carries Yards Touchdowns 0.0 0.0 0.0 You can see where those projections compare to other RBs in our Running Back Rankings. Atlanta Falcons running back Bijan Robinson ran for 170 yards and two touchdowns on 28 attempts during their overtime loss to the Carolina Panthers. Robinson brought in two of his five targets for three yards through the air. Robinson punched in his first score of the afternoon in the second quarter from three yards out. Later in the fourth quarter, Robinson tallied his second touchdown, on a four-yard run. His 28 attempts and 170 yards were the highest totals of his career. Since Week 10, Robinson has tallied at least 90 rushing yards in all but one contest. Overall, the Texas product tallied at least 100 rushing yards five games and tallied 15 total touchdowns. Given his role as the workhorse of the Atlanta offense, he should be viewed as a high-end RB1 heading into the 2025 season and remains an elite dynasty asset. Our trade analyzer estimates his value at 170 points, which makes his value similar to: Jahmyr Gibbs is projected for 0.0 fantasy points in PPR scoring this week as he faces the Green Bay Packers. Week 1 Projections Carries Yards Touchdowns 0.0 0.0 0.0 You can see where those projections compare to other RBs in our Running Back Rankings. Detroit Lions running back Jahmyr Gibbs rushed 14 times for 105 yards and two touchdowns during Saturday's loss to the Washington Commanders. He also caught six of his 11 targets for an additional 70 yards through the air. Although the Lions' season ended in an upset loss, Gibbs played phenomenal football, demonstrating elite efficiency on the ground and an exceptional target share through the air. He has firmly established himself as the centerpiece of Detroit's offense despite competing for touches with players like Amon-Ra St. Brown, Jameson Williams, Sam LaPorta, and David Montgomery. In case there was still any debate, Gibbs is clearly a top running back option in redraft and dynasty leagues for fantasy football. He should be one of the first few players off the board in 2025 drafts, and he could join elite company atop the scoring leaderboard next year. His rushing efficiency, pass-catching skills, and nose for the end zone are unmatched, and his role in a highly productive offense is just the icing on the cake.
